PAINTERS PAINTING

A candid history of the New York Art Scene, 1940-1970

- PAINTERS PAINTING is considered the definitive film on American painting.
- Among the featured painters are Robert Rauschenberg, William de Kooning, Jackson Pollock, Jasper Johns, Andy Warhol, Helen Frankenthaler, Frank Stella, Leo Castelli, Barnett Newman, Hans Hoffman, Jules Olitski, Philip Pavia, Larry Poons, Robert Motherwell, and Kenneth Noland.
- This 1972 classic has been digitally remastered and restored by the Museum of Modern Art (New York) and the University of Wisconsin Film Department.
- Promotion and outreach to focus on university art departments and art school chairs, as well as fans of the artists included in the film.

SYNOPSIS PAINTERS PAINTING is a vibrant collective portrait of the legendary figures who powered the tumultuous post-war New York art scene. Immediate and irreverent, the film has the feeling of an intimate conversation. De Antonio shows artists (and their critics and patrons) gossiping, drinking and talking about life and art, and in the process illuminates the genesis of Abstract Expressionism. Footage of the Metropolitan Museum of Art's landmark exhibition New York Painting and Sculpture 1940-1970 supplements the film. An invaluable resource for anyone interested in contemporary art, PAINTERS PAINTING brilliantly captures a turning point in American art and culture.
